Please note the following clarifications for accuracy, concerning the article "Where Did The Idea of An Immortal Soul Come From?":

The correct translation of the word "immortality" in Romans 2:7 (page 6) – should be correctly translated "imperishability" and not "immortality".

Nowhere does the scripture ever state that man's spirit is a "nonphysical component" (page 7).

How does God bring back a person's personality, his memory and his character? God is God, that is how! The text does not say how God does it, therefore we do not need to try and explain it, as the scriptures do not, it should be left as the scriptures have stated.

Satan has not yet deceived the "whole world", at this specific time. (page 7 & 8). The author uses Revelation 12:9 which addresses a future event, this does not refer to the present time. If Satan has deceived the whole world concerning the "immortal soul", then why are there people who believe and know differently, and are therefore not deceived?

Please note not all of the statements made in this "third party" article are necessarily the beliefs of The Grove Bible Fellowship.
